

Inner Kill. The Art of Dying Without Knowing it.

September 2, 2014

Almost everyone who embarks on the journey of purposeful living eventually becomes both a Inner Kill is not growing. Giving up on yourself. It's taking the safe way. Always covering yourself instead of taking risks. It's reacting. Not thinking. It's giving up control of your life to whatever or whoever is around you. Inner Kill is the death of self-respect.

Some symptoms of Inner Kill:

- You avoid decisions.
- You daydream about early retirement.
- You talk a lot about what you're going to do. But do nothing.
- You lay awake at nights. Sleepwalk by day.
- Unusual irritability becomes the usual.
- It takes two weekly visits to the liquor store, when once used to be enough.
- You find yourself talking to friends about the same things week after week.

The Purpose Checkup

After a certain age, many of us accept the necessity of regular physical checkups. We're also generally willing to review our financial situation with some regularity.

So if money, medicine, and meaning are all essential to a purposeful life, we might be wise to take guidance from the financial and medical worlds and adopt the practice of a regular checkup on that third dimension to ensure that our spirit — our sense of purpose — remains healthy.

Please read each statement carefully and take a few moments to decide on a true response for yourself. Then write the number that most nearly reflects that response. The answers offer the following range of responses:

1. Definitely disagree
2. Somewhat disagree
3. Somewhat agree
4. Definitely agree

INTERPRETATION

Having (Outer Life): The dimension of your external experience and activity — how effectively you relate to the “having” choices in your life.

Doing (Inner Life): The dimension of your internal experience and inner activity — how effectively you relate to the “doing” choices in your life.

Being (Spiritual Life): The dimension of your invisible experience and spiritual activity — how effectively you relate to the “being” choices in your life.

Scoring

Your score in each section is one measure of your development in that dimension. Your total Purpose Checkup score (out of 84) gives a measure of the power of purpose you are experiencing in your life at present.

Use this checkup to check in with yourself yearly, perhaps on your birthday!
